The first tourist hotel to be erected in Alaska will be built at Glacier Bay by a syndicate of Tacoma capitalists, who believe that Alaska is the future great Summer resort for Americans, and that Glacier Bay is the most attractive place up that way that has yet been discovered.

Come off the Roost.

Ever since the election an immense owl has taken possession of the back yard of Jack Furlong's saloon and kept an unmerciful hooting until day break.

When Furlong went to see what the matter was, Mr. Owl suddenly stopped, and our Democratic friend failed to locate the bird that threw such derisive insults at him.

Sunday night, however, changed the programme and Jack spotted him. A shotgun was secured, and Prof. Furlong, (who claims to be the finest wing shot in Nevada), managed to put one shot into his wing, breaking it. The distance was fully twenty feet.

The bird is now on exhibition at the Central, and has reached a civilized state, allowing himself to be petted, rolled over and handled by the commonest kind of people.

Raw, tender beefsteak, (secured at Gardner's, next door) seems to be his regular diet.

At night his eyes, fully as big as quarters, blaze and glint as the massive head slowly turns from side to side in a knowing sort of way. They are a rich yellow on the rims and jet black in the center, swelling and shrinking with the varying shadows of a flickering electric lamp.

When a dog comes into the room the bird's feathers puff up, a harsh sound comes from the throat as if steam were escaping and he assumes the proportions of a wash tub. Dogs are not generally stuck on staying around after taking a look at him, and the gamest canine will sneak out with his tail between his legs.

Furlong is very proud of Allen Thurman, as he calls him, but says that when anything hoots at him it has got to "come of the roost."

Ladies', Misses' and children's winter cloaks just received at Mrs. Stein's, also woolen skirts, vests, hosiery, mittens, facinators, hoods, Windsor ties, Gent's ties, handkerchiefs, ribbons etc. All kinds of millinery, also at very low prices. RESCUED FROM SHAME.

A Respectable Girl Inveigled Into a House of Ill Reputation.

Yesterday afternoon about one o'clock a young colored man was passing No 1 a house kept by Miss Birdie Moore, when he saw a young girl crying at the window. As he passed she leaned out the window and asked him how she could get out and told him she had been inveigled into the house without knowing its character.

He told her to go out by the back hall which she did and meeting her on the outside, he took her across the street to Mrs. Lee's.

Mrs. Lee is a colored lady, who took her in and cared for her until evening, when Mr. Roberts, proprietor of the Arlington House, furnished her with quarters and kindly took charge of her. She told the following story to an Appeal representative last evening:

"About a week ago I was calling on a young married lady in San Francisco, when I met the landlady of the lodging house where she stopped. She said she could get me a fine situation in Carson. My father died less than two months ago and left the family in rather straightened circumstances. I decided to accept the situation, and came up here with a letter to Miss Moore. I was met at the train by a young man who asked me if I was the lady who was going to work for Miss Moore. I said I was, and he took me to the house. When I heard of the character of the place they told me I knew where I was going when I left San Francisco.

"I did not dare to make any fuss then, but pretended to accept the situation until I could see a chance to escape.

"I do not blame the woman here as much as I do the woman who sent me here."

Last evening a subscription was started at the Arlington to send her home and parties desiring to contribute, can call there to-day.

The young lady, whose name is withheld, is a handsome, intelligent girl of 18 of modest appearance and her case excites the profoundest sympathy.

BOURBON BULL-DOZING.

How they Tried to Work It in Humboldt County.

The Reno Gazette has the following:

In canvassing the Humboldt county vote, when the Board of Democratic Commissioners came to Pleasant Valley, a strong Republican precinct, they found the tally sheet missing and threw out the vote. Nothing unusual would have been out of the way in this proceeding were it not for the "cunning" displayed by the Democratic ring that has so long had Humboldt by the throat, but by this act they brought the Democratic candidates for Assessor and Commissioner inside the limit of ten votes and threw the Republican candidates for Recorder and Clerk outside, thus enabling the Democratic candidates to call for a recount and depriving the Republicans of that privilege. These are the Democratic tactics pursued in Humboldt county, right under the nose of the venerable editor of the great Democratic reform sheet, the Silver State.

Editor Kelley must certainly have "private reasons" of his own for not denouncing the job as a barefaced attempt at theft, but probably he was too busy looking after "Boss Yerington" and Western Nevada to notice any shortcomings of his own Democratic ring in Humboldt. Editor Kelly is certainly a study, and we would ask him something about his jewelry or question him a little on his consistency if we had the time.

It is no necessary to add, however, that the job did not work, for Peter Anker, the Republican candidate for Commissioner gets in by seven and Guthrie, the Republican candidate for Assessor, gets in by two.

FOUND.—A wagon cushion. The owner can get it at this office by proving property and paying for this advertisement.

PAY THE MEMBERS.

Ex-Assemblyman Drury Thinks the Laborer Worthy of His Hire.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE APPEAL:—Some writer in your paper has suggested that the members of the Constitutional Convention ought to serve without pay. Against this I, as one who takes an interest in the welfare of Nevada, as well as in every part of our Nation, wish to enter a protest. It would un-American and injudicious to make provision for holding a convention composed of only such men as could afford to serve the State as delegates without compensation.

The only way in which the average citizen can devote himself to public affairs is by having the public pay his expenses in the mean-time. A constitution to be good for anything must take into consideration and protect the interest of the average citizens as well as those of the rich. If the interests of the average citizens are to be protected he must have a fair representation in the convention. It follows that the delegates must be paid.

A convention composed solely of delegates who could afford to work for nothing would not be a representative convention, in a true sense of the word. It would represent only the moneyed class. It would be of the rich, by the rich and for the rich. It would not be of the people, by the people or for the people.

To deny payment of per diem would be to deny representation to those in ordinary circumstances.

None of us would like to live under a government constructed solely by one class, whether rich or poor, and for that reason it is necessary that all shall have an equal opportunity to be heard, as in that way alone is it possible to maintain that equilibrium of power and influence so necessary to the well being and happiness of the commonwealth.

If any are to be favored, those comprising the poor or dependent classes are the ones to receive special advantages. The rich can always take care of themselves, and they generally do, even if constitutions and statutes are adopted or enacted not entirely to their liking.

One of the main causes of complaint among freedom loving Englishmen is that members of Parliament receive no pay. An attempt was made several years ago to expel a member of the House of Commons because he was too poor to attend to his public duties without financial assistance from his constituents, but the British spirit of fair play was victorious and the conspirators were thwarted in their schemes.

So again I say, if the good people of Nevada want a new constitution and expect to have one that will be founded in wisdom and justice, let them pay for it like men. Anything that is not worth paying for is not worth having. The constitution should represent the people—the whole people. Anything short of that would be usurpation—it would be anarchy.
